THE SMALL PAPER IMPRESSION, TWO VOLUMES CROWN FOLIO, LIMITED TO THREE HUNDRED COPIES, OF WHICH THIS IS NO. 284

INTRODUCTION.

THIS work, as originally planned by Mr Paterson, was to have included the arms of the Peers of Scotland from the time of Sir David Lindsay to the Union.

Several reasons have prevented the execution of this design. To have given the full achievements would have increased the volume to an undesirable bulk; of the arms of some peers there is no good representation to be found, and in other instances, as that of the Grahams, Viscounts of Dundee, the supporters are unknown. It will be found, however, that the collection as it stands contains a great deal of information as to the bearings of ennobled families extinct as well as existing. The arrangement is as follows:—

I.—ARMORIAL DE GELRE.

When the work was far advanced towards completion, the Earl of Crawford and Balcarres enabled me to make a very important addition to it by communicating the fact that the Bibliothèque Royale at Brussels possesses an illuminated armorial of the fourteenth century, which includes a number of Scottish coats.

The controleur en chef of the library at once gave permission that these should be copied, and most obligingly gave every facility for the execution of the work, which has been admirably done by Mr Bainbridge of Messrs Scott & Ferguson, who went to Brussels for the purpose. The Scottish part is given entire; it contains forty-five shields, of which thirty have crests, and is, with the exception of a few shields in the Roll of Caerlaverock, the earliest authority for the tinctures. The names have evidently been added at a much later date, from a list which is no longer in existence. This beautiful manuscript is in one thick volume, and forms a general armory of Christendom at the period.

The name of the author, Gelre, Hérault d'Armes, with the date 1334, is at the beginning; 1340 is placed below several shields, and in one place 1369 is written. The Scottish part of the armorial seems to belong to this latest date, and some of the entries probably to a still later period. It is at present proposed by M. Bouton of Brussels to publish a facsimile of the whole.

II.—ARMORIAL DE BERRY.

The Bibliothèque Nationale of France possesses one of the most valuable heraldic manuscripts in existence.

Gilles le Bouvier, its compiler, was born in 1386, entered the service of the Dauphin-Regent, afterwards Charles VII., and so gained the confidence of his master, that in 1425 he was sent as envoy to the Duke of Bretagne, and subsequently on other missions.

He was appointed a herald in 1420, and afterwards crowned and created Berry King of Arms by the King at Melun on Christmas day, according to his own statement, but the year has not been ascertained. It is certain that he held the first rank as a King of Arms in France.

Le Bouvier travelled over a great part of Europe, including Scotland and Ireland, and also visited the Holy Land and Egypt; of these travels he left an account, and also chronicles of his own time.

But his Armorial is the one of his works which interests the student of heraldry.

Charles VII. desired his king of arms to make an authentic collection of the bearings of the princes, nobles, and gentlemen of the countries he visited, and the result was this magnificent register. It consists of two hundred and five leaves, nearly half of which are vellum. Commencing with a genealogy of the Kings of France, illustrated by portraits, it gives an armorial of France divided into eight provinces, and containing upwards of fifteen hundred coats.

Germany, Spain, Scotland, Italy, England, and the East follow, bringing the total to nineteen hundred and fifty-three. It is fortunate for us that the intimate alliance between this country and France led Berry King of Arms, to carry out a more extensive visitation in Scotland than in any other country. While he collected only sixty coats in Germany and sixty-four in Italy, he gives a hundred and twenty-two from Scotland. In consideration of the official character of this collection, for the compilation of which every facility would doubtless be given by Alexander Nairne, then Lyon King of Arms, and its antiquity, the probable date being 1450-55, it has been thought advisable to reproduce the whole, although many of the coats are given the same, or nearly the same, in the Armorial de Gelre, and by Sir David Lindsay. The sheets are about sixteen inches by ten, and generally the shields are arranged in four rows, each containing three on a page.

Although this manuscript has been frequently reproduced or copied in part, it has never been published entire.

M. Francisque Michel gave a list of the Scottish coats in his Eccossais en France, and there was published in Paris in 1866 an account of this armorial by M. Vallet de Viriville, giving a list of its contents and the blazons of all the French coats.

The administration of the Library kindly allowed the sheets now given to be photographed, and the colours were marked on the photographic copy, and revised by the Reverend L. W. Forbes-Leith, to whom I have to offer my cordial thanks for his aid so readily given and so important. This armorial is referred to as A.

III.—Forman's Roll.

Sir Robert Forman, Lyon King of Arms, sent to France to "Our Sovrane lady Marie, by the grace of God Queen of Scotland and Dowager of France," probably in 1562, a roll of the arms "of two hundred and sixty-seven knights and landed gentlemen of the kingdome of Scotland." The original is not known to exist, but in the Advocates' Library there is an imperfect copy in trick, executed by Sir James Balfour, Lyon King of Arms 1630-54. It only gives two hundred and four shields, and of these fifty have been selected and reproduced in colour. 1532 is given as the date, but this must be a mistake; Sir Robert Forman was appointed Lyon in 1555, and Francis II. died in 1560. This roll is referred to as F. The coats given from this and the other MSS. are distinguished in the notes by an asterisk prefixed to the name; the letter L. indicates that the arms are in Sir David Lindsay's MS.

IV.—Sunderland Hall Manuscript.

A copy of an illuminated manuscript of the time of James VI., before his accession to the English crown; it contains the arms of the kings of Scotland, those of the peers of Scotland, and of three Highland families —Macleod (Lord of Lewes), the Lord of the Isles, and the Lord of Lorne.

These Highland coats, which are extremely curious, are reproduced. This volume was kindly lent by its owner, the late Charles Scott-Plummer, of Sunderland Hall and Middlestead, Esq., the representative of the old Kers of Yair, whose well-known burial place in Melrose Abbey has the inscription, "Here lies the Race of the House of Zair."

V.—Sir David Lindsay's Manuscript.

The celebrated heraldic manuscript of Sir David Lyndsay of the Mount, Lyon King of Arms 1542, now in the Library of the Faculty of Advocates, Edinburgh, having been published in facsimile in 1822, and again in 1878, is frequently referred to as L. The coats given in it are not repeated from later authorities, except in a few instances, where they have undergone material alteration.

Thirteen sheets, added to the original at various dates, have not hitherto been copied, and of these twelve are now given.

VI.—Workman's Manuscript.

An illuminated manuscript in the Lyon Office, compiled about 1565-66 by an unknown hand. It became the property of James Workman, a herald painter, whose name, with the date 1623, it bears, and consists of two parts—

First, Arms of foreign sovereigns, kings and queens of Scotland, peers of the kingdom, some Highland families, and later additions in trick.

Second, Seven hundred and forty-one shields of the minor barons and gentlemen, of which four hundred and eighty-one seem to be the original series, six on each leaf, and all in the same style. Two hundred and sixty have been added on the backs of leaves, some of them perhaps as old, or nearly as old, as the first series. Although this is the same size as, and is bound up along with the first part, I am inclined to think that it is a separate manuscript, by a different hand, and of an earlier date than 1565. Of these shields, two hundred and fourteen are reproduced, besides eight achievements. This manuscript is referred to as W.

VII.—Kings' and Nobility's Arms.

A small folio illuminated manuscript, belonging to the Lyon Office, roughly executed, without the author's name or a date. It is shown, by internal evidence, to belong to the period of the reign of Mary, after her second and before her third marriage. This volume has been rebound, and is lettered "Kings and Nobilitys Arms, I.;" it has no title-page, name of owner, annotation, or addition of any kind.

In all probability this was the work of a herald of the period, and has been in the library of the office ever since. It contains a series of the arms of the queens, from Jane, consort of James I., to Mary and her husband, Henry, Duke of Albany, in lozenges surmounted by the Royal crown, but without crest, motto, supporters, or any badges.

Then come "The Dukes, Marquises, Earles, Viscounts, and Lords of Scotland, as they ar plassed in the book of Armes."

This rather pompous title, which is a later addition, might have been shortened with advantage, as there is no duke, marquess, or viscount.

The arms of forty-three peers, and of the lord of Lewes, are given with helmet, mantling, crest, motto, and supporters; the crests of the earls all issue from coronets.

Lastly, three hundred and sixty shields of arms of minor barons and gentlemen; of these seven are given, with notes on a few of the others.

This volume is referred to as K.

VIII.

I am indebted to the Earl of Crawford and Balcarres for the loan of a valuable illuminated manuscript, the date of which is fixed, by internal evidence, as being after the accession of James VI. to the throne of England, in March 1603, and before March 1605, when Lord Home was created an Earl. The authorship is ascribed to "Sir David Lindesay of the Movnt, Knicht, Lord Lyon King of Armes," whose arms form the title-page.

It contains four Royal coats, arms of the peers, with one or two later additions, three coats of chiefs of clans, and two hundred and thirty shields of the bearings of the minor barons and gentlemen. Of these twenty-five are reproduced, with notes on some of the others.

This MS. is referred to as L. II.

It was purchased by its present owner, and is bound in vellum, with a foreign coat of arms stamped on each board; Castille quartering Leon, and another coat which I have been unable to identify; the shield placed on the breast of a two-headed eagle, above which is a crown.

This is one of the most beautifully executed works of the kind I have seen, both as regards design and colouring.

I X.

A thick duodecimo volume, entitled "Pont's Manuscript," the property of the Earl of Kinnoull, whose grandfather and father successively held the office of Lord Lyon, from 1796 till 1866. It was purchased for the late Earl of Kinnoull at Mr Smiton's sale in 1809, and remained in the Lyon Office till his lordship's death, when it was sent, along with his other books and manuscripts, to Dupplin Castle.

The present earl has obligingly allowed me to make use of it.

"W. Smiton, painter, 1780," is inscribed on a flyleaf.

The contents are:—

1. Two hundred and thirty-one shields of "The arms of sev^ll^ Scots gentlemen, &c., illuminate according as I found them in ane old MSS. in follio, writen and drawn (but not illuminate) by S^r^ Ja. Balfour, Lord Lyon, w^ch^ I had generously communicate to me by the favour of S^r^ Rot. Sibbald of Kipps, janr. Ao. 1711, whereof a great many is drawn from ancient sealls of charters of ancient dates."

At the end are the words, "Finis Balfour."

2. One hundred and eight shields in the same style. "Nota, the following coats are taken out of ane old MSS. herald book of Scots noblemen and gentlemen's arms, illuminat in quarto." Of these twenty-seven are given in facsimile, with notes on some of the others.

This collection is referred to as B.

The other contents of the volume are a copy of

3. "The arms of the nobilitie of Scotland," and of "the whole sirnams in Scotland," collected by James Pont, A.D. 1624, with later additions.

4. The sixteen quarters of the nobility of Scotland, "first drawn out by George Porteus, Herald Painter, Ao. 1699, according to there precedence, in yt years Roll of parliament, and since corrected and much enlarged by ye transcriber." Many of these are blank or incomplete.

5. A series of sixteen quarters, in some cases with the date of death and place of interment; others are copies of birthbriefs issued to Scotchmen abroad or about to go abroad; the dates are nearly all of the second half of the seventeenth century.

6. Notes of services of the nobility and many of the gentry, collected from the retours in the Chancery Office, 1550 to 1710.

X.—The Lyon Register.

The results of the general visitation of arms, 1672-78, which followed the passing of the Act of Parliament in the former year, were arranged in alphabetical order, in two series.

The first is—"The Blasoning of the Armes belonging to Knights Baronet, Knights Batchellar, and Barons within the kingdome of Scotland, at least of such of them as have matriculat conforme and in obedience to the said 21 Act of the third Session of the second Parliament of our dread soveraigne Lord King Charles the second, all sett downe as their sur-names agree with the order of the alphabet, blanks being left for adding the atchievem^{ts} of these who shall hereafter come in at ye end of each letter; and ye dates of ye Baronets patents being marked after their respective bearings as follows."

The other is—"The Blason of the Armes belonging to the gentlemen within the kingdome of Scotland who have matriculat their bearings and extracted warrants for using ye same, conforme," &c.

Thirty-two coats of arms are painted. It had been intended to place one at the beginning of each letter, but some have been left undone or merely sketched.

Of these, fourteen are given as examples of official herald painting in the time of Sir Charles Erskine, one of the most accurate and active officials who have worn the crown of Lyon.

The reference is L. R.

XI.—Heraldic MS.

The property of the Earl of Crawford and Balcarres, the loan of which is one of the many favours I have received from his lordship. It belongs to the reign of James VI., and gives shields drawn in ink of the arms of about five hundred and thirty of the nobility and gentry of Scotland.

Some have written blazons below, and others have the tinctures indicated by letters.

From this collection thirteen coats are given besides Siward, which has been placed among sundries.

The MS. is referred to as C.

XII.—Gentlemen's Arms.

A small folio volume, the property of the Lyon Office, apparently compiled in the reign of Charles I.; the only coat it contains with the Nova Scotia baronet's badge is Hope of Craighall, the year of whose creation is 1628. At the end a few additions on a larger scale and by a different hand have been made, probably after the Restoration; the latest of these has the date 1676. The coats are alphabetically arranged, but not all in exact order; there are sixteen on a page, nine hundred and thirty-eight in all.

Of these eighty-four are given, also notes on a few others.

The manuscript is referred to as G.; it is imperfect, the letter A. being wanting, but seems otherwise complete.

XIII.—Funeral Escutcheons.

Among the archives of the Lyon Office are fourteen volumes of Funeral Escutcheons and Birthbriefs, of which only three contain representations of the coats forming the sixteen or eight quarters displayed at the interments.

They are sketched in ink, with the tinctures indicated sometimes by letters, sometimes by lines.

The first of the three was compiled by Henry Fraser, who was appointed Ross Herald 6th July 1687, being designed "painter burgess of Edinburgh" in his commission. He died or resigned before 3rd February 1724, when Roderick Chalmers had a commission as Ross Herald.

Fraser's arms were registered soon after his appointment, he being then "herauld painter." The volume is a thick quarto, containing one hundred and fifty-one leaves, on some of which there are two Funeral Escutcheons, but a few of these have merely names without drawing or blazon of arms.

Sixteen coats are taken from this collection.

The second is a large thick folio, bound in dark leather, with an ornamental device, and the letters $_{F}{}^{E}{}_{E}$ on each board.

It begins with Patrick, Earl of Marchmont, who died 2nd August 1724, ends with Mary, Countess of Sutherland, whose death occurred in 1766, and contains two hundred and forty Funeral Escutcheons; some of them are mere sketches, and others incomplete.

From this volume twenty-three coats are given.

The third begins in 1762, and gives fifty-one Funeral Escutcheons, some of which are copies of older ones; nothing has been found in this that need be copied.

These records are referred to as F. E.

XIV.—Sundries.

In the notes on the thirty-nine coats given under this heading, the sources from which they have been obtained are stated.

To Mr Paterson is due the entire credit of suggesting the plan that has been followed in making this collection of Scottish Arms; namely, to take from the various authorities, as nearly as possible in chronological order, the coats not given by Sir David Lindsay, and not to repeat those already given. In carrying out this, I have exercised a discretion in two directions. The arms of a family are given more than once where there is a notable variation in the bearings, and some are omitted which seem erroneous, or are merely an older coat differenced by an ordinary mark of cadency.

The special interest which, from its antiquity and beauty, attaches to the Armorial de Gelre, renders all apology for giving it entire quite unnecessary; it has been thought desirable also to give the whole of the Armorial de Berry, although involving a good deal of repetition.

The publisher has, wisely I am sure, spared no trouble or expense in procuring perfectly reliable copies of these MSS., and every justice has been done to the originals in the exact and spirited reproduction of the coats.

All the plates in the volume are the work of Messrs Scott & Ferguson, and have been most carefully and accurately executed.

In a work of this nature it is obviously impossible to refer to authorities, or even to indicate all the sources from which information has been drawn.

Among these are the official registers of the Lyon Court, and the various manuscript collections in the library of the office; Mr Henry Laing's two invaluable volumes of "Scottish Seals;" manuscript notes by the late John Riddell, advocate; and information furnished at various times by the late Alexander Sinclair, Esq., who was always willing and seldom unable to assist in solving a genealogical puzzle.

From Mr Marryat's "Year in Sweden," notices have been taken of some of the numerous Scotchmen who settled in that country in the seventeenth century.

Besides the MSS. named, there have been examined those bequeathed to the Library of the University of Edinburgh by the late David Laing, LL.D., those at Sunderland Hall, in the Library of the Faculty of Advocates, in the College of Arms of England, in the Library of the British Museum, and a curious and well-executed illuminated MS. belonging to Macleod of Macleod. It gives the arms of the peers, of the families of Macleod, Maconell, and Macleod of Lewes, with supporters, crests, and mottoes, two hundred and fourteen shields of the minor barons and gentry; also the arms of the Emperor and several kings.

At the end are some interesting entries of the arms, with an anagram or quotation, and autographs of several envoys at the court of James VI., or foreign visitors of rank.

For instance: "M. T. J.—Non est mortale quod opto. Scripsit Sterlini, 11 Septembris, anno ultimi temporis, MDVIC. Steno Bille, manu ppo."

The others are: Christian Barnekau, Stirling, 1594; Duc de Ventadour, no date; John Septimus, baron Lichtenstein and Nicolspurg, Edinburgh, 1587; Mandropius Parsburg, 1588; Henry Below, 1585; Nicholas Theophilus 1585, St Andrews.

There is also a Latin inscription by Christianus Barnekaw, Danus, Edinburgi, anno 1586.

Steen Bilde of Bildesholm, and Christian Barnekov of Birkholm, were ambassadors sent to be present at the baptism of Prince Henry; Barnekov, Manderup Parsbjerg of Hexholm, Henry Below of Spotterup, and Dr Nicholas Theophilus, were envoys from Denmark to Scotland in 1585.

At the end is added—J'ay laissé mes armoiries a Monr. Scha, en tesmoignage d'amitié, Du Bartas.

Ex arte et marte.

This volume was the property of, perhaps was executed by, Guillaume du Bartas, the poet, who died in 1590, having been ambassador from the King of France at the court of James VI. The legatee was probably William Schaw, Master of the King's Works, and Chamberlain to the Queen, who died 18th April 1602, aged fifty-two.

It came into the possession of Alexander Brodie of Brodie, Lyon King of Arms 1727-54, whose daughter and heir married John Macleod, younger of Macleod.

There are many names, such as Baillie, Blair, Cockburn, Dalzell, Fawsyde, Guthrie, Haldane, Kirkpatrick, Moncur, Ogill, Preston, Renton, Tait, Inglis, &c., which occur in almost every collection.

On the other hand, there are a large number of families of whose arms there is no representation to be found at all. Of these may be mentioned Adair of Kinhilt, Bain of Tulloch, Caldwell of that Ilk, Dunlop of that Ilk, Haig of Bemerside, Mow of Mains, Craigengelt of that Ilk, Deuchar of that Ilk, Cuthbert of Castlehill, and the Highland families of Maclachlan, Mackinnon, Macfarlane, Macnachten, Macnab, and Gunn.

As regards the notes, it is a cause of deep regret to me that more time was not available to render them worthy of the plates they are intended to explain and illustrate. Thrown together as they have been in the intervals of official work, and dealing chiefly with names, dates, and blazons, mistakes must have been made, and have passed unnoticed, but I shall be contented if the result be accepted as an honest attempt towards the establishment of the heraldry of Scotland on a basis of fact.
